

The Faculty of Law - Aristotle University of Thessaloniki in cooperation with Faculty of Law-Trier University host a Workshop under the aegis of DAAD with subject: Brexit: Now What?

Following the DAAD Summer School that took place in Trier University this September, the Workshop focuses on the imminent and controversial issues of referenda, direct democracy and the consequences of Brexit in the European Union. Workshop's aim is to explore a number of dimensions of the Brexit process from both a legal and political perspective. The lectures will try to shed light on the changing balances within the European Union, the economical affect of the recent Referendum in the UK and the role of the social factor in the configuration of the current legal and political situation, based on the 21st century realities of the European Union.

Lectures will be held in both German and English.
